Career Summary:

David has 33 years' experience at the sharp end of the construction industry first taking on a maintenance and defects manager role with the Kier group following many years as a tradesman. David then worked his way through the ranks learning his trade with established site and project managers gaining valuable experience and knowledge before taking on his own projects within a wide sector. David has experience within the private and commercial sector including residential, schools, hospitals, Civils and office blocks.

David spent a number of years with BAM Construction where he developed his safety management skills before moving into structural steel and then became a Health & Safety consultant with Green Hat.

David is passionate about Health & Safety and his role as Senior H&S Consultant at Green Hat allows him to positively influence health and safety cultures through proactive engagement at all levels whether it be through the Principal Designer, Safety Advisor or Management System Development interfaces with clients.

David is a firm believer in finding ways to help people and organisations to embrace health and safety whilst ensuring they remain competitive within their individual sectors. Key to this is his ability to provide multiple solutions to problems and to be relatable, open and honest with clients so that they can continue to move forward.

David has a passion for photography and rugby and combines these through his support of Nantgaredig RFC where he spends his days capturing those magic sporting moments.
